

It's Easy to Be

ProLife

Critical thinking allows people to form opinions on issues facing us today. When you respond to arguments in favor of abortion using simple facts and clear logic, you can help people think critically about this difficult issue.

Matter of Individual Choice

Pro-Choice: Abortion is a matter of individual choice because no one can say with certainty when a fetus becomes a person.

ProLife: Basing support for abortion on a vague notion of "personhood" avoids the facts. This life and death issue doesn't have to be decided using religious, moral or philosophical arguments; there are also inarguable scientific facts. Because science proves human life begins at fertilization, abortion ends a human life and is clearly a violation of basic human rights.

Abortion is a Women's Issue

Pro-Choice: Men can't have an opinion about abortion because they can't get pregnant.

ProLife: Every abortion involves the participation of a man somehow. About half of abortions are performed on male children. Men's participation can range from coercing women into having abortions, to experiencing post-abortive trauma when their child's life is taken. Abortion is an issue of human rights; is there any human rights issue where only one group of people is allowed to hold an opinion? If you believe every human being has value and deserves legal protection, you have a moral obligation to speak out in favor of that, no matter who you are.

It's My Body

Pro-Choice: Every woman has the right to control her own body and make her own reproductive choices. A fetus is a part of a woman's body because it is dependent on her for survival in the womb.

ProLife: This argument fails to recognize the scientific reality that a pregnant woman has already reproduced and that the child growing inside of her is not part of her body but a completely different human being with a different body and DNA. The baby has his/her own blood type, heart, brain and may have different colored eyes, hair and complexion. From the moment of fertilization a new, unique human being is present. The word conceive is actually a synonym for the word produce. Besides, even after birth, we are all dependent on others for many years.

It's a Personal Matter

Pro-Choice: The government shouldn't interfere in this highly personal issue.

ProLife: As Thomas Jefferson, one of our founding fathers, wrote: "The care of human life and happiness, and not their destruction, is the first and only object of government." (continued)

In modern society, it is naive to suggest that government can be absent from this debate on the protection of human life. Laws regulate areas much less fundamental than the right to life. The real issue is whether the government will fulfill its responsibility to protect and preserve innocent human life or continue to allow this most basic right to be denied.

Risking Women's Health

Pro-Choice: Statistics show abortion is safer than carrying a child full term. Women shouldn't be forced to risk their lives and health if they don't want to.

ProLife: Abortion advocates claim that abortion is 11 times safer than carrying a pregnancy to term. Even if we accept these statistics, they don't prove very much. If a woman has an abortion, she has a 99.9994% chance of survival, compared to a 99.9943% chance if a woman carried her pregnancy to term. It should also be pointed out that abortion related deaths are commonly underreported or reported under different "causes". Pregnancy-related deaths are often recorded for the whole nine months of pregnancy, including deaths that might have nothing to do with the pregnancy, such as car accidents.

Personally Opposed to Abortion

Pro-Choice: I personally oppose abortion, would never personally have an abortion and will work to lessen the number of abortions, but I think abortion should stay legal.

ProLife: Why are you personally opposed to abortion? Why would you never have an abortion? Why do you want there to be less abortions? The only reason to be personally opposed to abortion is because abortion intentionally takes the life of an innocent human being. If you believe abortion kills children do you really think killing children should remain legal? If abortion doesn't take the life of an innocent human being, why should there be less abortions?

Back Alley Dangerous Abortions

Pro-Choice: If safe and legal abortions are not available, women will be driven back to the days of dangerous back-alley abortions, resulting in needless injury and even death.

ProLife: According to the Centers for Disease Control, in 1972, the year before abortion was made legal throughout the country, 39 women died from illegal abortions while 24 women died from legal abortions. In a 1960 American Journal of Health article, Planned Parenthood's then-medical director, Mary Calderone, concluded that "90% of all illegal abortions are presently done by physicians."

Only Used in Cases of Rape/Incest

Pro-Choice: Abortion is used only as a last resort and is frequently used in cases of rape, incest or danger to the mother's life. Women must have the right to abortion because of these widespread problems.

ProLife: The truth is that abortion has become a widely used method of birth control in this country. Nearly half of all abortions are repeat abortions. Since 1973, more than 59 million abortions have been performed in the United States. About 1 percent of these were performed for reasons of rape and incest. Rape and incest are horrific crimes, however, abortion doesn't undo the harm that has been caused. All unborn children, regardless of how they were conceived, are living human beings who deserve to be protected. The unborn child is the second victim of the crime and shouldn't be treated as if she was the attacker.

"Abortion ends a human life and is a violation of basic human rights."
